Soldiers of Alpha Company, 1st Battalion, 34th Infantry Regiment practice for today's graduation.

IT'S ON!

Soldiers rejoice in the news: Graduation ceremonies back

By JENNIFER STRIDE
Fort Jackson Leader

Soldiers completing 10 weeks of grueling Basic Combat Training look forward to two things: Family Day and their graduation ceremony.

For the past few weeks, both events have fallen victim to the aftermath of flooding that resulted in gate closures, laundry lapses and motel room scarcities.

Two weeks ago, Soldiers from 1st Battalion, 34th Infantry Regiment who were winding down their training cycle had to tell loved ones that their Family Day and graduation might be canceled as well.

"I was very disappointed when our drill sergeants told us to call our Families and tell them to cancel their tickets because graduation and Family Day may be off the table," said Pvt. Elijah Keegan Stark-Haws of Alpha Company, 1-34th, "but we knew about the devastation that was going on out in town with the floods, so we understood."

Pvt. Vichay Tek of Foxtrot Company felt broken hearted, he said – "I was really, really looking forward to it."

When the 1-34th informed its Facebook audience that it might have to cancel graduation ceremonies, the feedback was quick and vocal.

"All week, there were literally hundreds of Facebook posts from Families that were upset," said 1-34th commander Lt. Col. Geoffrey D. Greene. "A lot of them were offering to bring their own water, bring their own food, sleep in their car – things like that – because some of the hotels were closed, and the city of Columbia didn't have potable water (and) Fort Jackson didn't have potable water."

"Now that we are having (graduation ceremonies), a lot of them are pretty ecstatic about it."

During the three small graduation ceremonies held since Oct. 1, bleachers at the Solomon Center were empty. Families, friends and loved ones were absent, causing a somber quiet to settle over the graduating Soldiers – but they still stood tall, proud of their accomplishments and happy to be recognized for completing their training.

"It sucked thinking your Family couldn't come see how different and how much better you've become," Pvt. Isaiah Solis of Echo Company, 1-34th Infantry Battalion said anticipating a similar graduation ceremony. "I'd have to wait another 20 weeks (Advanced Individual Training) to see them. It hit me right in the heart."

Pvt. Hunter Sterling of Delta Company was more philosophical.

"I was hoping to graduate like my Family members had before me," he said, "but either way it turned out, I'm happy to be graduating."

Then the good news came last week: Graduation and all its attendant pomp and ceremony was back on schedule, and Families again were welcome to celebrate en masse at Hilton Field.

"Everybody went crazy when they said our graduation was back on," said Pvt. Tori Stevenson of Bravo Company, 1-34th. "There's a lot of people – especially those who have children that really need (time to see their Families), and I'm really, really happy for them."

Monday, the Soldiers were excited to practice for graduation – even in cold, wet, blustery weather – because they would have the much-anticipated impressive graduation ceremony.

"In our last week, we heard that it was back, so we got to re-call our Families and say, 'No – come and enjoy Family Day with us and enjoy graduation with us.'"

"That was a relief and very exciting for us. It's going to be a very proud moment for my parents to see me walk out on the field and graduate," Stark-Haws said.

Wednesday, many Families came on post to spend the last day before graduation with their new Soldiers.

Since Soldiers must spend the day on post, the timing was perfect – Starbucks, the food court at the Main Exchange and other restaurants had reopened.

Soldiers returned to their barracks Wednesday evening to prepare for the big day.

"When it was back on, all the prayers had been answered," Tek said. "We were all relieved. ... We felt like everything had paid off."

The only difference between this graduation ceremony and past ceremonies is that Soldiers will be in their Army Combat Uniforms instead of Army Service Uniforms because the facility that provides laundry and tailoring services could not complete orders after the flooding.

"In the Bible, it says if you have faith of the smallest mustard seed, you can move the mountains," said Pvt. David Hankinson of Charlie Company.

"So I just kept faith in my God that He would give me Family Day and graduation, and refused to let any shred of a doubt cross my mind."

"I put in my best, and I'm getting to show out there on that field that I did, what it takes to be part of the best military in the world."

Fall fest offers candy, crafts and mild scares

By ROBERT TIMMONS
Fort Jackson Leader

Little policemen, firefighters, ballet dancers and the occasional ghoul or goblin will be out in full force this weekend as Fort Jackson celebrates autumn with a festival, 5-kilometer run and trick-or-treating in housing areas.

The "frightful" weekend will kick off at 7 p.m. Friday when Child, Youth and School Services offers a fall festival at the Solomon Center. All activities, games, prizes and treats will be free.

The festival is all about letting children have fun in their Halloween costumes, said Cindy Andre-Noel, CYSS outreach director.

"We spend all this money to buy costumes, so they should (be able to) wear them more than once," she said.

Costumes worn to the festival shouldn't be scary, she said, "because we have little ones there, and we don't want to give anyone nightmares."

The festival is one of many family-oriented events held each month.

"There will be games and activities for all ages," she said. A haunted house will be available for teenagers.

Other activities include creating Halloween-themed crafts, decorating pumpkins and bowling, as well as hayrides outside the Solomon Center.

Candy and other items will be given out as prizes and bonuses for completing games and tasks.

"Children can win candy as a bonus" for doing well, Andre-Noel said, but they will not earn candy for finishing a craft item — they'll take the creation home.

"For instance, if they are decorating a pumpkin, they will take the pumpkin home with them," she said.

Some posts hold so-called trunk-or-treating events to ease Halloween concerns, but Fort Jackson's festival is meant to complement traditional activities.

"This is not a replacement for trick-or-treating," Andre-Noel said.

The next morning, the Halloween Howl 5K run will start at 8 at the Twin Lakes Recreation Area.

Registration is ongoing, with late registration occurring from 6:30-7 a.m. the day of the run. For more information call the Fort Jackson Sports Office at 751-3096.

On Saturday evening, little ones will be scouting for candy and haunting housing areas. Both trick-or-treaters and drivers are cautioned to be aware of their surroundings while crossing streets.

The Army Family Morale, Welfare and Recreation office recently posted a website article that gave tips to keep "Halloween frights strictly be of the make-believe variety."

It says parents should inspect their children's candy for suspicious items and make sure children don't gorge themselves on candy. FMWR also advises that trick-or-treating children should stick together and be escorted by adults.

Soldiers from the 127th Quartermaster Company out of Fort Bragg, N.C., check water purifying equipment in the early morning hours Oct. 14 at Old Heise Pond on Fort Jackson.

20 days, 205,000 gallons

The 127th Quartermaster Company, Fort Bragg, arrived at Fort Jackson Oct. 6 and departed Monday — 20 days that included setup and teardown.

They got the word Friday that the water was good and that Saturday, they could dispose of excess water and pack up their equipment.

Before they dumped the approximately 15,000 gallons of remaining purified water, they treated it to ensure that it wouldn't have any negative effects on the environment.

The excess water then was pumped up the hill from the water site close to the hunting and cleaning station and was allowed to seep back into its source — Heise Pond. No chlorine should make its way into the pond.

Soldiers disassembled and packed up the Water Storage and Distribution System, completed the rest of packing on Saturday and rolled out — back to Fort Bragg — at 7:15 a.m.

They had purified 205,000 gallons and distributed 160,000 gallons on Fort Jackson.

Now, it's back to normal operations, although the unit is keeping an eye on developing weather systems.

1ST BATTALION, 34TH INFANTRY REGIMENT

ALPHA COMPANY

PVT. ELIJAH STARK-HAWS, 19

"I chose the United States Army for many reasons: I wanted to gain confidence in myself and better my leadership skills.

"Most importantly, I pride myself in being someone people can look up to, and an American Soldier in the United States Army is definitely someone people look up to.

"The most challenging part of basic training, for me, was rifle marksmanship; but with the drill sergeants' help on my form, my shooting, my aiming and breathing, I was able to pass – and that was really exciting.

"The Army gives you so many opportunities to better yourself. It strengthens your values and makes you a better person overall."

BRAVO COMPANY

PVT. TORI STEVENSON, 20

"For me, (the Army) is part tradition and part hometown. The Army War College is in my hometown, and my grandfathers and uncles were in military, so I kind of grew up around a military atmosphere.

"My favorite part of basic was the FTX3 (three-day field exercise). It took us about eight hours to dig a foxhole with our e-tools (small shovels) in the clay. We got ambushed on the last night by our drill sergeants.

"The most challenging part was living with 59 other females in such close quarters in the bay. It's easy to get negative when you're tired from training, so I always tried to keep everybody upbeat, always focusing on the fun stuff we got to do next.

"If you have the right mind-set, you can go far (in the Army), and it's so worth it."

CHARLIE COMPANY

PVT. DAVID HANKINSON, 18

"I've always wanted to serve in the military; I just never saw how it would fit with my life.

"The Army recruiters at school said with the Yellow Ribbon Program, the Army would pay for the college I want to go to, and I wouldn't have to pay a dime.

"Everybody should serve their country. It's a great country to live in, and a lot of people take our freedom for granted, and I think it's something we need to earn.

"My uncle served in the Navy, and my grandfather served in the Marines, and my brother just joined the Marines in March. I wanted to carry on the family tradition.

"My favorite part of training was the three-day field exercise. I love nature, and I had so much fun. We built our foxhole in three hours."

DELTA COMPANY

PVT. HUNTER STERLING, 20

"I joined the Army because of my father and my brothers. My father was a colonel in the Army; my brother Jacob was an Army staff sergeant. I remember watching, actually, three of my brothers graduate and wanted to follow in their footsteps.

"I wanted to be like my brother Jacob because he was my role model growing up.

"The three-day field exercise was a lot of fun and the most challenging part.

"There are a lot of opportunities with the Army. Joining is one of the better decisions I've made.

"You can grow as a person and learn a lot in the Army. The drill sergeants here are great leaders, and you can learn a lot from them. They are great NCOs, and they have a lot to teach."

ECHO COMPANY

PVT. ISAIAH SOLIS, 18

"I joined the Army because before I became a Soldier, I was kind of a dirt bag – I had no motivation.

"The day before I left for training, my mother, she said, 'I don't care how much money you make; all I want from you is for you to be a good man,' and I told her, 'I'm not just going to go in to the Army to be a good man but to be the best man I can – the best of the best.'

"I'm here to make everybody proud, and if I get to take care of some bad guys and serve my country along the way, it's a two-for-one.

"I loved the PT (physical training) part of basic, and the most challenging part was learning to deal with so many people with different backgrounds from different cultures – living with them, working together and acting as a team. It was a great experience."

FOXTROT COMPANY

PVT. VICHAY TEK, 19

"The Army held lots of opportunities for me. It gave me a chance to prove myself, my worth, become successful and direct my future with my own hands.

"My favorite part of basic (training) was getting a chance to push myself, figuring out the boundaries that I could pass and the challenges I could overcome.

"The Army is a great place to be. It's a great place to have a start and a great place to have a career.

"You have to go in there (Army basic training) knowing there's a chance for failure – so you have to have the reasons and the right motives, you have to keep pushing, and if you really, really want it, you will succeed."

Coaching kids through squeaks, squeals

By ROBERT TIMMONS
Fort Jackson Leader

"Do you get paid more in the band?" a child asked his instructor, a saxophonist in the 282nd Army Band.

"I get paid the same as any other sergeant," the Soldier replied as he fiddled with his grayish-silver instrument.

Peppered with questions about being in the Army as a musician, Sgt. Travis Myers answered dutifully before saying, "It's a nice job for a musician," and turning the interrogation back toward the task at hand – teaching young musicians from C.C. Pinckney Elementary School.

Myers and other members of the band were at the elementary school Oct. 22, conducting a skills clinic to help improve the students' fundamental musical abilities.

The skills clinics throughout the school year help students learn their instruments better while also meeting Pinckney's goal of "preparing students to be 21st-century learners through purposeful teaching, communication and collaboration," the school's band teacher explained.

Pinckney's partnership with the band and other on-post organizations is a central reason the school received the 2015 Lt. Gen. (retired) H.G. "Pete" Taylor Partnership of Excellence Award earlier this year. The award recognizes partnerships between military installations and school districts serving military children.

"Fundamentals are extremely important," said Alan Danahy, music teacher and band/chorus leader at Pinckney.

Some students have had little to no experience playing musical instruments, so learning the basics gives them a sound start. And it doesn't hurt that those teaching the skills are people the students admire greatly.

I see the children be "inspired when they see them," Danahy said. "They can relate to them because their parents are in the military. They have a great respect for them."

"If I brought in musical students from (the University of South Carolina), the children wouldn't respond the same," Danahy said.

"It's not the same. You can't duplicate the level of response the kids give the band members. It motivates them."

And motivate the children it did.

In the breakout session with saxophones, a chorus of squawks and squeals slowly changed to a cacophony of musical notes until students could play "Mary Had a Little Lamb" with aplomb.

Myers taught the four young saxophonists how to make sure their reeds worked properly, and demonstrated the correct tongue positioning, as well as how putting too much pressure on the mouthpiece could harm the instrument's sound.

Sgt. Travis Myers, a saxophonist with the 282nd Army Band, instructs a group of C.C. Pinckney Elementary School children on the proper way to play the instrument during an Oct. 22 skills clinic.

"Putting too much mouth pressure causes out-of-pitch sound," he explained as he led them in exercises to help loosen their tension on the mouthpiece.

"You have to catch (bad habits) early on, to make them better" said Myers, who has taught at the clinics multiple times.

Initially, it was hard for Myers, 25, to teach, but he found it rewarding when the students started taking to his instruction. Myers began playing when he was in the same grades as his students – third and fourth grades.

For Staff Sgt. Hochi Rosario, a flutist with the band, his first time instructing at the clinic was difficult.

"There was so much going on" with the flute/piccolo players that needed to be fixed, such as bad fingering and posture.

The clinics, though, really help the children appreciate music, he said with a smile.

Danahy agreed that music appreciation helped the students and said he was proud the children volunteered to try something so challenging.

"Playing an instrument, reading music and functioning as an ensemble member are challenging skills to develop, but I am very proud of my students for opening themselves to this experience," he said.

"Students' hard work pays off by the end of the year, when we present our concert performance alongside the 282nd Army Band."

The concert may seem a long way off, but the students are practicing hard.

While teaching the saxophonists, Myers noticed that students were having a hard time holding their instruments – some of which were almost bigger than the musicians.

"Wrap your whole hand around it," he said while demonstrating the correct grip. "It will hurt you in the long run if you don't."

Suddenly, a piercing note wrenched his attention.

"That's an interesting note," he said with a smile and kept teaching.

Don't lose your leave

Forfeited leave may be restored only ...

- when an employee's illness occurred or ended so late in the leave year that he/she could not use annual leave,
  - when correcting an administrative error caused the forfeiture or
  - when the demand of the public created an urgent need for the employee to be at work.
- Even when one of the requirements has been met, forfeited leave will be eligible for restoration only if it was scheduled and approved in writing before the start of the third biweekly pay period before the end of the leave year – Nov. 28 this year.

This leave year ends

JAN. 9.

Workers must schedule Use or Lose annual leave in writing before Nov. 28 to avoid forfeiture. Federal law and regulations limit civilians' unused accrued annual leave that can be carried over from one leave year to another – generally 240 hours for those in the United States and 360 for those working elsewhere.

Supervisors should review a current leave report to determine whether any employees have accrued more leave than can be carried over. They must be sure employees take the surplus leave, schedule it or indicate in writing their desire not to request or schedule the annual leave. Such documentation can ensure that employees clearly understand that leave is subject to forfeiture.

If you have questions, contact your servicing labor/management employee relations specialist at the Fort Jackson Civilian Personnel Advisory Center, at 751-1167 or 751-5063.

Voting: another way to defend freedom

By JOSHUA FORD
U.S. Army IMCOM

Voting-assistance officers at installations around the world will kick off the 2016 voting season campaign earlier than usual, hoping to inspire more Army Families to go to the polls.

The campaign will begin Nov. 4. At Fort Jackson, voting-assistance officer Joey Hewitt will coordinate efforts to educate Soldier voters.

"It is important for Soldiers to vote because it is one of the freedoms which they defend," said Rachel R. Gilman, voting-action officer at the Human Resource Command, Fort Knox, Kentucky.

"It's the job of the Voting Assistance Program to make registration, voting information, materials and assistance readily available to all eligible Army voters," she said. "We educate eligible voters about the importance of voting and provide every opportunity to register and cast a ballot."

Army voting-assistance officers educate Soldiers on the voting process, encouraging them to choose presidential candidates who interest them.

"Some of our population doesn't have confidence in the system and believe their vote will not count or that they should take part in the process due to being Service members," said Madeleine Roberts, IMCOM voting-assistance program manager. "We want to provide awareness and ensure they have the tools to be active participants, and educate them on their voting rights as citizens."

As individuals, Soldiers are allowed to be affiliated with political parties and to endorse candidates, Roberts said — although some Soldiers think regulations forbid them to do so even when they are out of uniform.

Voting-assistance officers can dispel confusion on regulations, and educate Soldiers on how voting can directly affect their investments, retirement plans and medical benefits, Roberts said.

Finally, voting-assistance officers meet with commanders to make sure they understand the importance of allowing their Soldiers the time to register and vote, even if it's by absentee ballot.

"Getting support from military leaders plays a big role in Soldier participation," Roberts said.

"The bottom line is (that) each individual vote matters — especially those votes coming from our military population," Roberts said. "They are the ones fighting on the front lines so we can continue to enjoy the freedoms we enjoy today, which include that right to vote."

VOTE WITH CONFIDENCE

Soldiers and others needing information on voting may visit Fort Jackson's Voting Assistance Office — Room 200 in the Strom Thurmond Building. # Post sends team to Super Bowl of logistics

By 1ST LT. ANDRALE JEAN-LOUIS
Headquarters and Headquarters
Company, 193rd Infantry Brigade

In the Army, where everybody can stand out based on merit, two logistics-minded Soldiers at Fort Jackson have done precisely that.

Sgt. Ebonie Covington of Alpha Company, 2nd Battalion, 60th Infantry Regiment won first place in the post's Supply Excellence Award competition, and Staff Sgt. Krystle Johnson of Bravo Company, 2nd Battalion, 13th Infantry Battalion placed a close second.

The 193rd Infantry Brigade has since represented Fort Jackson in the TRADOC-level competition, with Bravo Company, 2-13th again coming in second. That means Johnson and Bravo Company won the ability to compete Armywide. Results of that competition won't be available until next year.

The two Soldiers' achievements indicate their devotion to providing first-class support and leadership. The SEA is the Super Bowl of logistics.

The Chief of Staff, Army, Supply SEA Program resulted from the Total Army Worldwide Supply Conference in November 1984, when the deputy chief of staff

Sgt. Covington has demonstrated an atypical blend of technical and premeditated expertise that I have not yet seen in my 22 years ... with the United States Army.

— Capt. Michael Chung
Headquarters and Headquarters
Company, 193rd Infantry Brigade

for logistics commissioned the U.S. Army Quartermaster School to develop a program that would acknowledge supply excellence at unit and organizational levels.

The SEA now ensures consistency throughout Army units.

But the SEA is more than an award. In the supply world, it gives a logistician the right to say that "my Command Supply Discipline Program has been validated."

Covington's selection indicates that she is the finest logistician at Fort Jackson. The distinction speaks volumes about her proficiency and professionalism.

Covington is a one-person shop for her unit. When it comes to support, she values the team spirit and consistency that her command team and drill sergeants offer her every day.

"I wasn't too eager to participate in this year's competition since I'd been in the unit for only three months," she said. She did so, though, because "the unit fosters success."

Her zeal for supply discipline makes her want to become a warrant officer.

"During her time as supply sergeant within 2nd Battalion, 60th Infantry Regiment, Sgt. Covington has demonstrated an atypical blend of technical and premeditated expertise that I have not yet seen in my 22 years ... with the United States Army," said her commander, Capt. Michael Chung.

Covington, he said, is "on fleek" — she outshines the competition.

Unlike Covington, Staff Sgt. Johnson competed eagerly.

"It was a team effort with the commander and the company executive officer, with long nights toiling at the supply room to guarantee the inspection went efficiently and productively," she said.

Johnson felt disappointed but said she knew she could redeem herself at Army level, which she promises she will win.

SC HOUSING is here for you during and after our recovery.

SC HOUSING HAS A NUMBER OF SERVICES, SOME AVAILABLE YEAR-ROUND, THAT MAY BE ESPECIALLY USEFUL DURING THIS TIME OF RECOVERY. THESE INCLUDE:

SC HELP

SC HELP, South Carolina's mortgage rescue program, may offer temporary relief for homeowners in South Carolina who have been left unemployed or with a reduction in income due to the flooding in the state.

Those experiencing a loss of income should apply at schelp.gov or call 1-855-435-7472.

Homeowners need not be behind in payments to apply. There is NO FEE required at any point during the SC HELP process.

SC HousingSearch.com

If you are seeking an affordable place to rent, or if you have affordable rental property to list, this is a FREE internet based resource provided by SC State Housing Finance and Development Authority ("SC Housing") that allows you to search for rental housing across the state on the basis of your needs and budget. Please visit SCHousingSearch.com, or call 1-877-428-8844. (English and Spanish operators are available.)

FORECLOSURE RELIEF NOTICE

Effective October 5th, SC Housing has declared a foreclosure moratorium for loans in its portfolio statewide for 90 days. This means that foreclosure will not be initiated for the next 90 days and loans currently in foreclosure will have foreclosure actions suspended for the next 90 days. If you are having difficulty making your payment please contact our office for payment arrangements at 803-896-9521. If you are unsure if your mortgage is through SC Housing, check your payment coupon book; it will specify the name of your mortgage servicer.

SC Housing will also suspend negative reporting to credit bureaus during this period. Homeowners with a SC Housing mortgage can reach out to SC HELP for potential assistance with their mortgage payment.

Schools' Lego team seeks willing mentors

Fort Jackson's two elementary schools have been awarded a National Defense Education Program Grant to join the First Lego League, a program that introduces younger students to engineering.

Team leader and coach Gregg Taylor, a teacher at both schools, is looking for mentors and volunteers to help prepare members of new Team 225589 for Trash Trek, the 2015 FLL Challenge.

For the challenge, 29,000 teams of students will create products incorporating science and engineering in creative and innovative ways. They will build robots from brightly colored Lego building blocks and then put the robots through a series of assigned tasks.

The contest allows students to design, build, test and program robots using Lego Mindstorms technology; apply math and science to real-world problems; research the challenges facing today's scientists; learn critical-thinking, team-building and presentation skills; and participate in tournaments and celebrations.

For more information about the FLL program, visit www.usfirst.org/robotic-programs/fll. To ask questions of Taylor, email fj.patriots.fll@gmail.com.

Uncasing the battalion colors

Retired Col. Anthony De Luca, battalion commander during Vietnam, and retired Command Sgt. Maj. Stanley Thornburgh, who fought with the unit in Southeast Asia, assist Lt. Col. James Moyes, 3rd Battalion, 39th Infantry Regiment commander, in uncasing the battalion colors during an activation ceremony on Victory Field on Oct. 21. The Provisional Lightning Battalion became 3-39th during the ceremony. The unit has a storied history, having fought on the Western Front in both world wars, and in Vietnam.

MILITARY FAMILY APPRECIATION MONTH CONTEST: FIND THE NUTCRACKER PRINCE!

Four Nutcrackers will be hidden in separate Family and MWR locations, one each week beginning Nov 2.

Clues will be posted on the Fort Jackson FMWR Facebook Page and the Dot Corn Facebook page. Using the clues provided figure out which Military Family Appreciation Month event (see Page 5 for events and calendar) or Family and MWR facility is holding a Nutcracker. Ask any customer service provider if it was hidden there. If you are correct, the representative will present you a Nutcracker with the prize you have won written on a tag attached to it. Bring it to Marketing in the Joe E. Mann Building to claim the prize. The difficulty and value of the prizes will increase each week.

- » Week 1: Nutcracker tree ornament and $25 MWR bucks.
- » Week 2: Nutcracker Storybook and CD of Nutcracker music (Provided by CCB) and $50 MWR bucks.
- » Week 3: Nutcracker Tree Ornament, two Nutcracker Ballet T-shirts and the Nutcracker CD and $75 MWR bucks
